

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON

Halls Tenant Privacy Notice

for managing infectious diseases (including COVID-19)

Intercollegiate Halls

london.ac.uk/halls

Table of Contents

- What data is the University collecting and for what purpose?..... 3
- How do we ensure the collection of the data is lawful? 3
- Who do we share the data with? 4
- How long we keep your data for 4
- Your rights 4
- Finding out more 4

Version: 2:0
Revised: 24/01/2023
Next review: December 2024

The University of London Intercollegiate Halls of Residence, as part of its duty of care, must from time to time collect, store and manage the data of its tenants in relation to infectious diseases, including COVID-19. This should be read in conjunction with the overall Halls Tenant Privacy Notice.

What data is the University collecting and for what purpose?

Information collected from resident who declare a relevant infectious disease

- Name
- Hall
- Room number
- Phone number
- Email address
- Nature of the illness

This is used in order to:

- Monitor case frequency in the halls population and report anonymised figures to the executive team
- Administer contact tracing within halls if and when this is required by law or by local public health authorities
- Inform system-wide infection prevention and control interventions (e.g., changes to catering, cleaning, event organisation)

How do we ensure the collection of the data is lawful?

The University has to have a valid legal basis to process your personal data:

- We are processing the data to support our accommodation services for the performance of your contract with us as a tenant
- The University may process your data where necessary for compliance with a legal obligation arising from Health and Safety Law
- Where we collect 'special category' health data, the University relies on its obligations relating to Health and Safety Law, reasons of substantial public interest for reasons of public interest in the area of public health
- If in a medical emergency where you cannot give consent and we need to provide your data to a doctor or other medical services, we will do this in regard to your vital interests or the vital interests of another person

- Where we are aggregating personal data relating to health conditions to provide statistics for our own planning and decision making or to report to local or central government or health agencies, we do so for statistical purposes in the public interest

Who do we share the data with?

The University may, under the legal bases specified above, share data with other organisations:

- Report to local authority public health teams
- Notifying your institution where registered to study that their student may need support
- Reporting to the Office for Students where required

The University may use an external contractor or 'data processor' to store or manage its data. The University contracts with StarRez to manage its tenant data. StarRez will process this data only for purposes specified by the University and will be bound by contract to meeting the University's obligations under the UK General Data Protection Regulation.

Your personal data will not be passed to any other third party without your consent, except where the University is required to do so by law.

How long we keep your data for

The University can only retain your data as long as it is necessary for the purposes it was collected for. The University will continue to review its retention of COVID-19 data in the context of the public health situation and government guidance.

Your rights

You have a number of rights under the General Data Protection Regulation, such as the right of access to your data (the 'Subject Access Right'). For more information, please see the University's Data Protection page at the following link:

<https://london.ac.uk/about-us/how-university-run/policies/data-protection-policy>

Finding out more

You can find out more at the University's Data Protection page at the following link:

<https://london.ac.uk/about-us/how-university-run/policies/data-protection-policy>

london.ac.uk/halls